CONCLUSIONS

- Masked words evoked distributed patterns of activation in well-established language regions.
- Imageability differentiated activations in left temporal and bilateral frontal regions.
- Frontal activation was observed with no evidence of conscious perception.
- Fusiform gyrus did not differentiate conditions.
- Word processing begins before awareness.